Food Drive Guide

Your Food Drive Matters

At the Food Bank of Iowa, we rely on food drives to provide the high quality, non-perishable staples that our partners rely on to feed their clients. They’re our best source of foods like canned fruits and vegetables, dry pasta, boxed meals, and even personal care items like toothpaste and deodorant. All items that we collect through food drives are distributed to partners and clients in our 55-county service area.

Having a steady supply of non-perishable foods also allows us to focus donated funds where they can make the most impact: purchasing fresh fruits and vegetables, frozen meat, dairy products, and eggs. These nutritious foods are seldom donated, and their high costs make them difficult for hungry Iowans to buy. Through this effort, we’re able to turn every $1 donated into 4 meals.

How To Host a Food Drive

Plan to Motivate

Set specific dates for your food drive to run and create a communication plan. Motivating people to participate in your drive is vital to ensuring its success. Think about ways that you can energize your team (the back of this sheet can get you started).

How to Motivate Your Team

There are lots of ways to rev your team’s engines and get the donations rolling in. Check out these tried-and-true ideas to grow your food drive, or create your own!

Celebrate a Special Event

Turn your birthday, anniversary, wedding, or any other special event into a fun, rewarding activity that benefits our neighbors in need. Tie a food drive to your next special event and encourage friends and family to contribute in lieu of gifts.

Offer a Reward

Boost donations by entering your participants into a raffle or offering a special prize for the largest donations. Think about offering gift cards, prime parking spots, or tickets to movies or upcoming events.

Make it an Event

Carnival Day

Host a special day with games, entertainment, and a cookout. The price of admission is a contribution of non-perishable food!

Jeans or Casual Day

Employees or students who contribute to the food drive get a special dress-down day.

Lunch Money Monday

Encourage your team to bring lunch and contribute the money they would have spent.

Chili Cook-Off

Team members prepare their favorite recipe and judges rate the best. Attendees get a taste for a contribution to the food drive.

Bake Sale

Sell cookies, brownies, and other treats around the office or school, with all sales benefiting the food drive.

Make it a Contest

Dunk Tank

Want to see your boss or principal get dunked? If your team reaches a certain milestone with their food drive donations, it’s time for the big cheese to take a bath!

Vote Your Favorite

Have team members “vote” for their favorite local sports team, TV show, or anything else — their ballot is their food drive contribution!

Internal Competition

Departments, classes, or any other groups you may have can compete against one another. Whoever can bring in the most food for your food drive wins bragging rights!

External Competition

Have a crosstown rival or a nearby frenemy? Work with us to create a friendly competition with them and drive your food drive contributions through the roof!
